Link between sustainable development, health

Some experts say there are nine boundaries to Earth's major biophysical systems that humans can safely operate within, and once they've been breached, irreversible changes will likely occur. Three boundaries have probably been exceeded; what health effects that might have:

System	The problem	Boundary	Current level	Potential health effects
Climate change	Build up of greenhouse gases: carbon dioxide, methane, nitrous oxide	350 parts per million	393.87 parts per million (March 2012)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>Increased heat-related deaths as heat waves increase in frequency, intensity</li><li>Drop in food production, increased malnutrition in vulnerable regions</li><li>Health effects of extreme events, such as droughts, floods</li><li>Rising ozone levels, higher diarrhea rates, changes in vector-borne diseases</li></ul>

Rate of biodiversity loss	Extinction rate of species as a result of climate change, land use changes	10 species per million per year	More than 100 species per million per year	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>Positive, negative changes in exposure to disease vectors due to deforestation</li><li>Loss of potential natural sources of new pharmaceutical agents</li><li>Decline of fish stocks and its effect on nutrition in many communities</li></ul>
---------------------------	--	---------------------------------	--	--

Nitrogen cycle	Amount of nitrogen removed from atmosphere for human use	35 million tons per year	121 million tons per year	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>Possible increased risk of colon cancer because of higher concentration of nitrate in drinking water, particularly in people who eat few fruits, vegetables</li><li>Exposure to toxins released by algae blooms in fresh water caused by high concentrations of nitrates, phosphates</li></ul>

Technology Development Scenarios

Our efforts to develop environmental technologies will change over time as we place greater emphasis on pollution prevention approaches with high efficiencies in resource use and on the restoration of critical ecosystems. At some point in the future, we will have moved from an environmental paradigm built on control and cleanup to one also based on assessment, anticipation, and avoidance.

Sustainable development is ensuring quality of life to present and future generations. It is also maintaining natural resources and balanced ecosystems while reaching human development objectives. The United Nations organized a conference in Stockholm, Sweden, in 1972 to take stock of the human impact on the environment on a global scale. International organizations noted that we could no longer continue to develop as if the Earth had unlimited resources.

In 2015, countries adopted 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) set by the United Nations General Assembly. The SDGs cover social, environmental and economic development among others. And the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development is a plan of action set to reach those goals. Even though progress has been made, we still need to discuss progress and call for more action. Citizens have also become important agents of change by raising awareness. But setting and achieving these goals will require the efforts of governments and world leaders.

Summary: "As the world evolves, growing awareness and alarming concerns over global warming have emphasised on the need for more sustainable urbanisation. There is a dire need to bring in 'conscious consumerism' decisions to have a positive economic, social, and environmental impact to build a successful economy. To create this, the government of India had announced the 'National Smart Cities Mission' to develop 100 smart cities across the country, making them citizen-friendly, tech-savvy and sustainable. The tech-advances deployed, it was hoped at the time, would bring the best global practices to Indian cities and orient these towards sustainability."

Step 2: Analyze Editorial Cartoons

Select one of your examples from step one and review it carefully.

Common Core Standards*

CCSS.ELA-Literacy.RH.9-10.1 Cite specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary sources, attending to such features as the date and origin of the information.

CCSS.ELA-Literacy.RH.9-10.2 Determine the central ideas or information of a primary or secondary source; provide an accurate summary of how key events or ideas develop over the course of the text.

Key Ideas and Details

Let's start with the basics.

Identify the following if applicable:

1. Cartoon Title (e.g., "Presidential Election")

2. Name of Cartoonist (e.g., Thomas Nast)

3. Publication (e.g. New York Times)

4. Date of Publication (e.g., 2021)

5. People, Places and/or Objects Depicted (e.g., senator; Washington, D.C.; money)

6. Central Event or Issue (e.g., a speech; political corruption)

7. Action Taking Place (e.g., lobbyist hands politician money)

Infographics

Step 1: Infographics 101

Common Core Standard*
CCSS.ELA-LITERACY.RH.9-10.7 Integrate quantitative or technical analysis (e.g., charts, research data) with qualitative analysis in print or digital text.

1. What Are Infographics?

Information+Graphic=Infographic. Infographics* are visual images such as charts or diagrams used to represent information or data.

Read more about Infographics in SIRS Issues Researcher:

- ❑ Making Infographics | KQED Teach (Website)
- ❑ Creative Visual Representation (Magazine)
- ❑ It's Not What You Look At, It's What You See: Data Visualization Tools Update (Magazine)

2. What Are the Types of Infographics?

Infographics are usually displayed as one or a combination of these types:

Compare/Contrast: Illustrates notable similarities or differences as a table or simply a list with graphics.

Geographic: Displays data with a location map (e.g., smoking rates per state in the U.S.).

Hierarchy: Demonstrates a chart with levels (e.g., organizational chart).

Information: Similar to a poster, summarizes information from an article or other research visually.

Process: Demonstrates a process as a how-to (e.g., a recipe), to teach the workings of an object or principle (e.g., photosynthesis), or flow chart to show choices in a decision process.

Time-Oriented: Displays data over a chronological time period (e.g., timeline).

Statistical: Showcases one or more graphs, tables or lists to display data.

Step 1: Primary Sources 101

Common Core Standard*
CCSS.ELA-Literacy.CCRA.R.10 Read and comprehend complex literary and informational texts independently and proficiently.

1. What Are Primary Sources?

Primary Sources are original, first-hand materials about people, places, or events created by people who were personally involved.

Conversely, secondary sources are analyses of people, places, or events created by those who were not present.

2. Examples of Primary Sources Include:

City Struggles to End Bullying in Schools

By [Name] | Study, Learn and Engage with Real World Issues | 10/1/2019 | Grade 10-12

Summary: "A total of 100 in a three classroom that years ago left over 1000 dead and another changed with 1000000000. The tragedy sparked a cascade of reactions about the potential for bullying on the part of control. Since then, city departments of education officials say they have confronted bullying aggressively with new policies and efforts to get to the root of the problem, in hopes of preventing a tragedy from the start. But some families and advocates say more should be done to better children's safety." (The Street Journal) This article reports on efforts by school officials to reduce bullying in New York City schools.

Acmeism

In 1910, A. Akhmatova, S. Gorodetskij, N. Gumilëev, M. Kuzmin, and O. Mandelstam--a group verse writing. The acmeists spurned the esoteric vagueness of symbolism, which then dominated emotional suggestiveness at the expense of lucidity and sensory vividness. They strove instead for clarity and precision.

Literature Scope Notes - Literary Period

Print this topic

These notes represent the criteria that we have used in assigning authors to literary periods.

All authors have been indexed by literary period, with each author being assigned to the period(s) in which he or she flourished his/her major work.

Our editors have organized the works under both the period and the author's life dates, 1558-1603.

Most of the works in the Period, 19th century (including the 18th and 20th centuries).

- Anglo-Saxon Period, 450-1100
- Anglo-Norman Period, 1100-1154
- Middle Ages, 1154-1500
- Tudor Period, 1500-1603
- Elizabethan Period, 1558-1603
- Jacobean and Caroline Period, 1603-1660
- Commonwealth Interregnum Period, 1642-1660

Literature Scope Notes - Literary Movement

Print this topic

These notes represent the criteria used in assigning authors to literary movements.

A group of writers, journalists and poets who met weekly at the Algonquin Hotel in Manhattan in the 1920s, many of whom wrote for magazines such as Vanity Fair and the New Yorker. The main founder members were the poet and critic Dorothy Parker, the humorist Robert Benchley and the playwright Robert E. Sherwood.

American Naturalism

Novelistic movement which emerged at the end of the 19th century. Leading figures, such as Jack London and Theodore Dreiser, were also journalists, and their work shows an emphasis on social documentation.

1984

Orwell, George (1903-1950)

New York: Penguin, 1981

About the Author

Author: George Orwell

The year was 1948. Dying of tuberculosis, George Orwell pushed himself to the limits of physical exertion to complete the manuscript for what would become his best-known work, the novel 1984. Mitzi Brunsdale, author of a recent biography of Orwell, notes that he wrote the book while "continually coughing up blood and near collapse" (Brunsdale 16). Ironically, the suffering that accompanied the production of Orwell's final work also coincided with the highest point of literary fame he would personally experience (Brunsdale 16).

Orwell was born Eric Arthur Blair on 25 June 1903 in Motahari, Bengal. His father was a sub-deputy Opium Agent in His Majesty's Bengal Civil Service. Orwell's mother was half her husband's age. According to the custom of the day, she left India to provide an education in England for her children. Orwell's father did not accompany them.

In the 1850s, '60s, and '70s the Pre-Raphaelites appropriated Keats's predominantly aestheticist values, Tennyson's sensuousness, and Ruskin's enthusiastic worship of beauty, to foster a decorative conception of art and literature instead of an ethically oriented one. In the 1870s and later the influence of Walter Pater was paramount. He urged the sensitive individual "to burn always with this hard gemlike flame" and to find the most precious moments in the pursuit of sensations raised to the pitch of "the poetic passion, the desire of beauty, the love of art for art's sake." In the 1880s and '90s, the subjectivity (as in Keats and Shelley) and the sometimes exaggerated individualism (as in Byron) of romanticism encouraged the "Aesthetic Movement," as it came to be embodied in the paintings of James McNeill Whistler and in the poetry and life of Oscar Wilde and his coterie.

African American Poetry

On this page: Authors Primary texts Criticism Reference Literary movements

African American Poetry contains nearly 3,000 poems by African American poets of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. It provides a comprehensive survey of the early history of African American poetry, from the first recorded poem by an African American (Lucy Terry Prince's 'Bars Fight', c.1746) to the major poets of the nineteenth century, including Paul Laurence Dunbar and Frances Ellen Watkins Harper.

The authors and works included in the collection show the huge variety of this relatively unexplored area of American literary history. Coverage includes writers from both North and South, from rural and urban backgrounds, and ranges from university-educated professionals to those for whom the very acts of reading and writing constituted a defiance of Southern slave laws.

In the Big Rock Candy Mountains there's a land that's fair and bright Where the handouts grow on bushes and you sleep out every night Where the boxcars are all empty and the sun shines every day On the birds and the bees and the cigarette trees In the lemonade springs where the bluebird sings In the Big Rock Candy Mountains In the Big Rock Candy Mountains all the cops have wooden legs And the bulldogs all have rubber teeth and the hens lay soft-boiled eggs The farmer's trees are full of fruit and the barns are full of hay Oh, I'm bound to go where there ain't no snow Where the rain don't fall and the wind don't blow In die Big Rock Candy Mountains In the Big Rock Candy Mountains you never change your socks And the litde streams of alcohol come a-trickling down the rocks The brakemen have to tip their hats and the railroad bulls are blind There's a lake of stew and of whiskey too You can paddle all around 'em in a big canoe In the Big Rock Candy Mountains In the Big Rock Candy Mountains the jails are made of tin And you can walk right out again as soon as you are in There ain't no short-handled shovels, no axes, saws or picks I'm a going to stay where you sleep all day Where they hung the jerk that invented work In the Big Rock Candy Mountains The lyrics of "The Big Rock Candy Mountains" project a hobo's idea of utopia - a vagabond vision of paradise. [...] he tramped intermittently in London's environs until October 1931. In As Peter Stansky and William Abrahams note in The Unknown Orwell, after Blair returned from Paris and resumed his tramping in and around London during autumn 1930, he developed a pattern that alternated tramping excursions with literary activity, all of it designed to support his goal of becoming a writer. "At this point, from the autumn of 1930, an extraordinary, fluctuating pattern of down-and-out writing and living was inaugurated - comfortable Southwold for the manuscript, poverty-stricken London for the experience, the two interacting and alternating until the book had been lived and written" (273) .

After Eric Blair returned from Paris in the spring of 1928, he began tramping that autumn through the metropolitan area of London and his native Southwold. Around that time, a traditional ballad that had been popular in the hobo world since the turn of the century received its first recording, sung by a hobo known as Haywire Mac a.k.a. Harry McClintock. McClintock and other hobos in the U.S. and Europe had been singing the tune at least since the 1890s.1 Originally, it described a child being recruited into hobo life by tales about "The Big Rock Candy Mountains." Such recruitment efforts, however amateurish, apparently did occur, with hobos enchanting poor children with fantastic "ghost tales" featuring wondrous adventures of hobo life.2

Did the future author of Animal Farm ever hear the song? Might its hobo vision have figured in Orwell's creation of Old Major's Beasts of England and Moses the raven's fraudulent Sugarcandy Mountain? This hobo ballad, which became known as "The Big Rock Candy Mountains" - even though die unsanitized version below was never published verbatim in any recordings3 - runs as follows:

One sunny day in the month of May,

Ajocker he come hiking;

He come to a tree, and "Ah!" says he,

"This is just to my liking!"

Chorus:

"I'll show you the bees.

Your Ladyship demands a description of the person of Miss Harriet Byron, January 6.

report tells you, Love has listed me in the mind of the person of Miss Harriet Byron, January 6.

every one who beholds her admires her.

beholds her admires her

Your Ladyship confines your enquiries to her person, and not to her mind. Perhaps it may be so; and that their envy is much sooner excited by the one than by the other. But who, Madam, can describe the person of Miss Harriet Byron, and her person only; animated as every feature is by a mind that bespeaks all human excellence, and dignifies her in every Air, in every Look, in every Motion?

No man living has a greater passion for Beauty than I have. Till I knew Miss Byron, I was one of those who regarded nothing else in the Sex. Indeed, I considered all intellectual attainments as either useless or impertinent in women. Your Ladyship knows what were my free notions on this head, and has rebuked me for them. A wise, a learned lady, I considered as a very unnatural character. I wanted women to be all Love, and nothing else. A very little Prudence allow'd I to enter into their composition; just enough to distinguish the Man of Sense from the Fool; and that for my own sake. You know I have vanity, Madam: But lovely as Miss Byron's person is, I defy the greatest Sensualist on earth not to admire her mind more than her person. What a triumph would the devil have, as I have often thought, when I have stood contemplating her perfections, especially at church, were he able to raise up a man that could lower this Angel into Woman? —Pardon me! —Your Ladyship knows my mad way of saying every thing that rises to my thoughts.

Sweetness of temper must make plain features glow: What an effect must it then have upon fine ones? Never was there a sweeter-temper'd woman. Indeed from Sixteen to Twenty, all the Sex (kept in humour by their hopes, and by their attractions) are said to be good-temper'd; but she is remarkably so. She is just turned of Twenty, but looks not more than Seventeen. Her beauty hardly yet in its full blow, it will last longer, I imagine, than in an earlier blossom. Yet the prudence visible in her whole aspect, gave her a

The screenshot displays the ProQuest Ebook Central interface for the book "Astronauts: A Space Discovery Guide" by Margaret J. Goldstein, published by Lerner Publishing Group in 2017. The interface is divided into a left sidebar and a main content area. The sidebar contains a search bar, a table of contents, and book details. The main content area shows the book's cover, which features the title "ASTRONAUTS" in large, bold, teal letters, with "A SPACE DISCOVERY GUIDE" in a yellow banner below it. The cover also includes the text "SPACE DISCOVERY GUIDES" and an image of an astronaut. The top navigation bar includes links for Home, Search, Bookshelf, Settings, and Sign Out. The bottom right corner indicates the page number "Page 1 of 50".

The screenshot shows the 'Adobe Digital Editions' window with the title bar 'Add Library to Library'. The main heading is 'Authorize Your Computer'. Below it, a paragraph states: 'Authorizing your computer enables you to:'. This is followed by a bulleted list: '- Easily transfer Adobe DRM protected items between multiple computers and mobile devices.', '- Read Adobe DRM-protected items on computers or mobile devices (up to six).', and '- Restore your content from backup whenever you need to re-install the OS.' Below the list, the text 'Select eBook vendor, then enter your login ID and password below' is displayed. There are three input fields: 'eBook Vendor:' with a dropdown menu showing 'Adobe ID', 'Adobe ID:', and 'Password:'. To the right of the 'eBook Vendor' dropdown is a link 'Create an Adobe ID'. To the right of the 'Password' field is a link 'I forgot my password'. At the bottom left, there is a checkbox that is checked, with the text 'I want to authorize my computer without an ID'. At the bottom right, there are two buttons: 'Cancel' and 'Next'. A small error message box is visible at the bottom right, partially obscured, with the text 'Adobe Content Error Message'.
